Soft throwing right hander, Barker is coming off 83 quality innings at Div II Harding University. While his fastball can reach the mid 80s, it usually sits around 82, and doesn't have much deceptive action on it. Throws changeups very often, to both lefties and righties. Pitch has great downward break and has been a very difficult for hitters to square up, having a BAA of .048 (1-for-21), despite 18 of those balls being in play. This likely isn't sustainable, as even weak contact will produce a higher average, but is still an impressive number. Doesn't throw breaking pitches very frequently, but they have good break, likely in part to lower velocity. Will often throw a get-me-over curveball early in the count to righties. Got hit around hard in his first start vs the Rafters, but bounced back with a solid 5.1IP in Wausau. Overall, Barker will throw an overwhelming amount of strikes today, and his soft fastball could be squared up often.
