6'8" right-hander from Taiwan with a mid-90s fastball, Lin is a legitimate MLB prospect. Was unable to find any collegiate numbers and the Synergy sample size is very small since Kenosha doesn't upload video. Fastball has topped out at 97, but usually sits in the lower 90s. His long fram helps increase effective velocity, making this one of the quickest fastballs we have seen this summer. Mixes in some offspeed early in the count, especially to righties, but favors the fastball with two strikes. Struggles to locate his offspeed, 75% of non-fastballs are taken for a ball. First time we've seen a registered splitter, although it is thrown very rarely. Has not started a game yet this season and the longest he has gone has been 2.2 innings. Has been very wild and very hittable, but has garners attention due to his measurable size and velocity.
